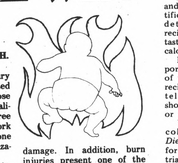
Fire Burns—Especially Children

Allan R. Magie, Ph.D., M.P.H.



About 6,000 burn-injury deaths occur in the United States each year. Of those persons requiring hospitalization two out of every three were burned at home. Work burn injuries account for one out of every five hospitalizations.

For both burn-caused injuries and deaths the first ten years of life are the most risky. Other high risk ages are the early working years and those over 50. Burn injuries occur almost twice as frequently in males as in females.

Burns rank second only to traffic accidents in terms of years of life lost. This reflects the relatively young average age at death for burn victims.

Because of the nature of burn injuries, victims stay in hospitals an average of twice as long as those patients injured in other ways. About one out of every six or seven burn injuries require intensive burn care. Such specialized burn care costs over $100 million each year in the United States.

In addition to hot liquids, the more common hazards causing hospitalized burn injuries are flammable clothing, gasoline, automobiles, chemicals, grease and cooking oils, stoves and ovens, and home heating units. Leading causes of burn deaths are fires in private dwellings, ignition of clothing, combustion of flammable materials other than clothing, and hot materials, corrosive liquids, and steam.

Although the total number of persons suffering severe burn injuries is small, the impact of those burns is so great that they require much greater attention. Burns not only alter the appearance of victims but they frequently result in serious psychological damage. In addition, burn injuries present one of the most difficult problems of treatment in medicine.

To prevent burn injuries, especially in children, you should:

1. Not allow children to play with matches.
2. Buy only nonflammable clothing.
3. Not leave lighted stoves unattended.
4. Install smoke-detector alarms in homes (between bedrooms and kitchen and furnace room).
5. Store combustible materials with care.
6. Crush all cigarettes and cigars when discarding.
7. Keep fireplaces properly screened.

The word vaccine came from a Latin word meaning "cow" because the first vaccine — for smallpox — was made from a substance from cows.

Receives Plaque For Appomattox Senior FFA

In recognition of this achievement, the Appomattox High School FFA was presented a handsome engraved trophy by the Robert E. Lee Conservation District. FFA president, David Stratton, was given a scholarship to the youth seminar held at VPI this past summer. Stratton told the conservation board about his opportunities to learn conservation during the one-week seminar. "This was one of the best learning experiences I've ever had," he said.

The Appomattox FFA Chapter was selected for their conservation work on their land laboratory. They lease about 20 acres of land adjacent to the school for learning experiences.

A conservation plan was developed for the FFA by the Soil Conservation Service. The Robert E.Lee Soil Conservation District provided financial assistance in developing their outdoor classroom and nature trails. The main purposes for this project are to serve as a learning aid and as a model to emphasize conservation in the school and community. The Robert E.
